- Identify infrastructure services to promote business development within the region

1. Planning for Better Access

It is a requirement of the Disability Services Act 1993 that public authorities develop and implement a Disability Access and Inclusion Plan (DAIP) that outlines the ways in which an authority will ensure that people with disabilities have equal access to its facilities and services. Other legislation underpinning access and inclusion includes the WA Equal Opportunity Act 1984 and the Commonwealth Disability Discrimination Act 1992 (DDA).

The GEDC considers a DIAP essential, as information from the 2015 Survey of Disability, Ageing and Carers (SDAC) identifies 18.3% of people reporting disability in 2015.

2. Responsibility for the Planning Process

The Business Services Manager is responsible for conducting an annual evaluation and review of the Disability Access and Inclusion Plan. The Disability Services Plan report will be included in the Commission's Annual Report.

The GEDC is mindful of the needs of people with disability and delivers its services to include people with disability. The Commission recognises that people with disability have the same rights as other members of the community. The GEDC acknowledges that all clients have a right to consultation, courtesy, information and the opportunity to express their views on the Commission's services.

3. Progress since 2012

The GEDC is committed to facilitating the inclusion of people with disability through the improvement of access to its information, services and facilities. The GEDC is also committed to supporting staff with disability and open to equal employment opportunities for people with disability. The GEDC adopted its first Disability Service Plan (DSP) in 1996 to address the barriers for people with disability who need to access the GEDC's services and facilities. The DSP addressed both its statutory requirements under the WA Disability Services Act (1993) and its obligations under the Commonwealth Disability Discrimination Act (1992).

As part of the Disability Services Act public authorities are required to provide a review report of achievements under the current DAIP so from 2012-2016.

Periodic reviews of the initial plan highlighted the need for staff awareness and understanding of disability access and inclusion to our information, services and facilities. The GEDC will strive to continuously improve staff awareness of the need to consider people with disability when delivering services by reviewing our strategies annually.

The GEDC plans to continuously improve access to facilities and staff awareness when delivering services with clients and stakeholders.

4. About the plan

The Goldfields Esperance Development Commission has adopted this Disability Access and Inclusion Plan and is committed to ensuring that people with disability can access the Commission's services and facilities. The Plan is subject to review and may be amended and extended as priorities and needs change and as new capabilities emerge with respect to disabled access methodology and with the introduction of new technologies.

The Plan includes:

- Information on the Commission's facilities and services
- A policy statement about the Commission's commitment to addressing the issue of access for people with disability, their families and carers
- The identification of objectives and strategies to overcome barriers faced by people with disability
- Expected timelines and persons responsible for the proposed strategies
- A method of review and evaluation for the Plan; and

- Information about how the Plan is being communicated to staff and people with disability.

5. What this means for agents and contractors

The Disability Services Act (1993) requires DAIPs to be implemented by staff as well as agents and contractors. Services to the public provided by agents and contractors are to be conducted in line with the 7 desired outcomes in the DAIP of the GEDC. Agents and contractors will be expected to report to the GEDC annually on their progress in achieving the desired outcomes.

6. How the plan was developed?

The Assistant Director Business Management and a Senior Project Officer of the Goldfields Esperance Development Commission were charged with the responsibility for developing, reviewing and evaluating the Commission's Disability Access and Inclusion Plan. The original DAIP was amended and updated and took into account changes to the Act. Assistance and guidance was obtained from the Disability Services Commission in the development of the Plan. The DAIP was advertised in the local press and on the GEDC website for a period of three weeks to obtain comment and feedback from the public.

7. Policy Statement

Access for People with Disability, their Families and Carers

The GEDC works within a consultative framework, involving a variety of representative individuals and groups in all of its projects. The GEDC targets its service provision to industry, investors, community groups and government agencies, rather than the general public. The GEDC is a small agency, dealing with a relatively small number of people, service delivery can therefore be tailored to individuals on a as needs basis.

The GEDC recognises that people with disability make a variety of valuable contributions to social, economic and cultural life, and may be valid representatives to the Commission's consultative process for particular projects. The GEDC is committed to ensuring that current and prospective clients with disability, their families and carers are able to fully access GEDC services. The particular needs of individuals or client groups are always considered, and service delivery adapted accordingly.
